Gamefly switch review

A terrible company. The customer service is absolutely awesome. First they charge a lot of money for this service, so I expect good customer service, but they struggle rudely and ignore. Twice now I haven't been to the game they shipped. This would be great if they just sent another game away immediately (because thinking about it, I paid $22 a month to have 2 games out at a time, so every day I don't have a game in my possession, I lose money). But they didn't ship another game out immediately. You have to wait days, sometimes weeks for them to ship the game, and then when they ship it, you have to wait at least 3 days to get it. So in one example I waited a week to get the game, didn't get it, they finally gave me a report that it was gone, then I waited 2 weeks for the next game, I checked my game queue and it was mysteriously empty. I asked for some compensation, maybe 2 weeks free to compensate for the awesome service, but nothing at all, they didn't care. Just buy the game you want, get a PSN subscription and get the game when they go to sell there. Don't waste your money on this awesome and greedy company, they don't deserve money, again I have to wait more than 2 weeks to get the game in my queue, which is a new game. I introduced them that I had waited a couple of weeks and they told me to turn it into another game that was completely defeated, a lot of time and money. I bought my switch during blackfriday 2018 and the only game I bought was Pokémon Mario Go Kart and Bots. Although I work, I find that Nintendo Switch games are more expensive compared to ps4 games, so I miss the subscription from gamefly just to switch, having to buy all new Nintendo switch games doesn't seem to be worth it to me. Video game company GameFly GameFly is a video game rental service, a letter founded in 2002 that recently flooded my YouTube experience with ads that say it rents games from GameFly for 54 cents a day, and like the smartest companies, they offer something too good to be true. 30-day free trial (I'm a sucker for a free trial, it's why I spend a year paying $16 a month in an Audible book that I haven't listened to). My thought process is simple enough: rent a newer game that I don't want to pay the full price or the game looks attractive. Especially I'm interested in playing a newer Nintendo game since the Nintendo name. I also hope to play a new Resident Evil 3 remake since the game gets some backlash for being a full-price game, but it takes less than 10 hours to finish. When you first subscribe to GameFly, you will be asked to create what is called a Q in your Q, you will be asked to keep at least 10 games that you are interested in playing from gameFly's library. So for me, I have Resident Evil 3 at the top of my list, followed by Luigi Mansion 3, Star Wars Jedi: Fallen Order (PS4), then old games that I haven't played like Days Gone, Catherine: Full Body and Dragon Quest XI (Switch). However, putting a game at the top of your Q doesn't mean you can get that game because each game has a certain number and it shows a high, medium, low and very low availability. After creating your Q and all I can assume is that some guys who play eenie, meenie, miny, moe with games of your choice, GameFly will send you some games. What GameFly did well, partly about GameFly that impressed me the most, was their fast and professional mailing system. After GameFly informed me that my game had shipped, I received them two days later. I get both Luigi Mansion 3 and Star Wars Jedi: Lower Orders (numbers 2 and 3 in my Q respectively). The game will be delivered priority in a white envelope. The game itself is placed in a CD paper envelope, which is protected by cardboard sleeves. At first I was a little concerned with coming back to the game thinking I would have to go through the hassle of buying an envelope and paying to ship the game back, but GameFly was taken care of in the envelope they sent you as a back envelope with paid postage, so all you have to do is insert the game back into the sleeve and protect the cardboard, put it in the envelope and put it back into your inbox. Is GameFly worth it? So with such a great service, why did I decide to cancel my subscription? Unfortunately, after a month of waiting and returning four games from my Q, I still haven't got the game I'm waiting to play: Resident Evil 3. This doesn't mean GameFly is bad. It's not a service that I believe will benefit me in a month when the price jumps around $23 a month, where I can buy one of the games in my Q (seriously, if I want to play Death Stranding or Days Gone, I can pick them up for about $20 now). Despite this, there are a few types of people who I would recommend GameFly, if you have a lot of free time and win the game quickly, I suggest you consider GameFly, on average I only play about 20-30 hours a month, rarely finish one AAA game during that time, but I can see people who win 4-5 games a month who benefit from this service, especially if they are lucky enough to get a new version quickly. I might also recommend this to people who love Nintendo games but are sick by paying $60 for a game that came out three years ago (see you breath of the woods). Finally, I would recommend this to gamers who want to try some games that they are unsure of and do not want to pay to own GameFly, a great service with a variety of games, but not for everyone. If you hope to use it to keep up with the current game, I'll take a look elsewhere. However, if you want to save a little money on a relatively old game or a stupid Nintendo game that has never been discounted, GameFly can be a service that will benefit you greatly. There's a reason they've been around for 18 years and I don't see how the run ends any time soon, how can I know if I can trust these reviews about GameFly? Danilo of Hayward, CA Review original review: December 10, 2015 Now I'm 28 years old, obviously they have a successful business Anywho, I decided to try again because of the far cry 5 and cyberpunk thought that 15 per month was better than $130 for 2 games that could meh anywho me busy and gamelocked far crying instead of cyberpunk and cyberpunk still sent out yesterday I was in California, so but i sold me on eBay and 2 days untapped delivery when the West Coast was going to the West Coast. As far as you send it back, if your post office scans it in consumption, gamefly will send what's in your Q anyway, if they don't scan, just send a letter, it's like the letter will take 4-5 days, when in fact it should be scanned because it's a priority mail package, so you can also use it in USPS and tell women to scan in, so yes, a lot of waiting, etc. not in them, some people need not to be in the middle of nowhere and How does the world work? Read the full review of Dennis of Myrtle Beach, SC Verified Review: August 23, 2020, where I live, it takes 3 days to get the game when it's delivered. It takes 1-2 days after putting the old game before the game on my list is sent out to me, so overall it's a 4-5-day turnaround between sending in an old game and getting a new game in my place. In less than 2 months I've won a $60 game, a $30 game and I'm playing another $60 game now, worth the money. If there is a game you have to really get, just remove everything from your wish list, but that game is sure to be delivered. I've tried a lot of games that I won't have a chance to buy, so it's really great. I recommend at least a game plan 2 this way, when you finish one game and return it, you can play other games while you wait. When you cancel your subscription, they want your game back within 7 days or they will charge you for them, so make sure to cancel the date you canceled. If you cancel before the service month, you will lose the rest of the time. Read the full review Q.b. Seattle, original review, wa auditor verified: August 18, 2020Knowing this and you haven't sent my next game in Que but still charged my bank card on Sunday after hours, there's a con you guys are working to get someone to pay $16 and can rent two games a month, but if I pay $23 to play four games in a month and I notice on the UPS track you guys get it from within my two days it's back for you to send and take your next game and take the next. First of all, I'll add this to social media so that customers can be aware of what's going on, Erik of Houston, TX Verified Reviewer Original Review: June 30, 2020I Rent my first game from Gayfly, I mean GameFly and it was 5 days later and still never received my game. Ever expected to get the game in the mail, just check every day, hopefully get it. But it never made it, though Q said it was out for almost a week. The first game and this issue is a red flag ??? and I canceled the subscription immediately. Now I remember why I canceled it several years ago geezzz what went wrong Gamefly is that they'd take a week if a month and when you get the game installed, download updates and the next thing you know your next monthly payment is on it's a strategy Gamefly uses so they can stretch their inventory and dollars more while punishing you (without asking or saying anything) so they can get instead, if lost, so they feel they have to delay you on purpose until you say something, then they won't. For a month, Screw Gamefly, please do yourself a favor and help save money problems and play other people's games, Gamefly is the worst video game company in the world. They say no problem, they will send the game back as soon as they get it. When I called to check on them claimed they never received my game. They got their game back within a day of sending me a letter, but when it came to my own personal game. I sent a letter by mistake, they still claimed it must be lost in the mail. Very shady company Sarah of Jasper, IN Verified Reviewer Original Review: September 19, 2019So Summer I decided to get this for my teens big mistake! One game at a time, I thought I'd get 5 games in 3 months, so I canceled. When cancelled, they sent one game that my daughter wanted to play. It arrived on Friday afternoon, so when the post office closed until Monday in our area, I waited until the following Monday and took it to the post office. Just a few minutes ago, I received a threatening email from GameFly stating that they charged me for the total number of games! A game that I no longer have in my possession! Worthless now I'm arguing the allegations against my card company and sending a good word about being outside curt replying emails. This company at all costs! Today I found out that they tried to charge me for the game. I have to call you back. I suffer from severe anxiety and customer service is not helped and gives me panic attacks. I won't get GameFly again in my life and I don't recommend them. Stephen's Mesa, AZ Review original review: February 27, 2019 I opened an account just fine, then I get a message when I try to add a game, so I chat with someone. They closed my account because my roommate had an account and did not return the game, so they refused to open a DOVER of Pittsburgh account, PA Verified Reviewer Original Review: Jan 8, 2019 My wife subscribed about 15 days ago for 1 game / 2 months $9.99 agreement and we never received the game. When you have a child waiting for a game, it can be difficult to explain, so this is your last choice. They're not trustworthy. When contacting them, they ignored and blamed USPS, but I received shipments from abroad and they often arrived. She chose Mario for the switch and since it never arrived. Now they say they're sending goodbye to Con.
